- (a) Building an evidence base for adaptation. The Project will support: the identification of a core set of climate adaptation research topics through Participatory Action Research (PAR) and through an applied research programme deployed along a salinity gradient; the development of PAR processes to monitor, evaluate and promote appropriate endogenous adaptation responses being practiced by farmers and aquaculture producers; the promotion of resilience building measures identified by communities and sub-sector experts and the evaluation of climate adaptation technologies and approaches that show potential for scaling-up.
- (b) Water quality monitoring and reporting. The Project will support: the development of a real-time salinity monitoring and forecasting system comprising of a network of automated salinity monitoring stations and a network of Common Interest Groups; a study to complete the design of the salinity monitoring system including the development of a multifunctional data platform; the establishment of the multifunctional data platform equipped for data storage and the processing of data and dissemination.

- (c) Knowledge management and dissemination. Activities related to knowledge management and dissemination include: the development of a knowledge sharing programme; the formation and operation of an inter-provincial thematic ad hoc group on climate change adaptation; the organization of inter-provincial end-user/stakeholder groups for specific production models and research; the systematization of knowledge outputs in formats readily accessible to different audiences; training of trainers including common interest group leaders for the replication and scaling-up of successful technologies and approaches and the dissemination of results through farmer-to-farmer extension through trained community interest groups leaders, learning events, field visits and study tours and presentations of results at national and regional conferences and events.
